The Turban of a Sikh is truly a thing very special,
Some consider it burden, for Gursikh no hassle.
For some wearing turban becomes a big chore,
Therefore they wouldn't like to keep it any more.
A true Sikh lives n' dies with turban, it's a serious matter,
'Cause with turban on, a Sikh and Guru connect better.

Ridding turban off, they say one becomes modern,
But no primitiveness in turban, they better learn.
Guru said that a Sikh without turban is not norm,
It makes one unique by providing a special form.
Cleaning a child and changing its diapers is not fun,
Yet to become a mom a woman wouldn't try to shun.

True, one might hurt for having a turban on,
Yet Life is always full of surprise n' danger prone.
They knew wearing turban is going to be full of risk,
Yet after 9-11, Sikhs in America did not try to frisk.
Ignorance about turban is not fault of an American,
Rather it's weakness of the people we call our own.

Every Sikh who migrated to west, had he kept turban on
All the confusion n' ignorance about us would have gone.
It's only honest that to believe in Sikhi turban one must wear,
Those without it, true identity of Sikhs they should not smear.

Accept turban as Guru's gift, along-with other articles of faith,
And let the world know, true Sikh always returns love for hate.
By tolerating different cultures and different folks,
Love will prevail forever and hate soon will choke.
